Our First Home

A red couch, a bookcase full of books, a small black chair, a quaint fireplace & tons of pictures of us, or the places we have been, decorate our first home. After several months of anticipation, as well as multiple moves, we finally moved into our apartment on December 17. It took us a few days to sort through all of our stuff before we could decorate & make it feel like our home.

Since we have moved in we have had a few adventures. One day our closet door smashed me on the forehead, which left a big knot, another time we came home & our front door was open (it was blessing nothing was stolen) & just a few days ago we came home to a foul stench coming through the air vents. But over all we absolutely adore our first home. It has become a nice place to retreat to after a long day of work. As we often hear, "Home is where the heart is." Our apartment has grown to be a place of rest, peace & joy, & holds a special place in our hearts.

TRAINING IN DALLAS

As you may well know, April & I moved to the Dallas area after returning from our honeymoon in December of last year. On January 7 we began training here in Dallas along with our 7 teammates. This has turned out to be quite an adventure for us!

We are loving the opportunities we've had so far to learn from past & present missionaries, as well as from Scott Reynolds (former missionary to Rio de Janeiro) & Ron Freitas (former missionary to Curitiba) who are leading our training here with Continent of Great Cities.

We have been able to speak with missionaries who are working in Rio, Porto Alegre & Santiago, Chile. Also, General Jim Brickman has been working with us to develop our strategy for reaching the people of Niteroi. And of course, there is the dreaded Language Studies which are all consuming in their scope, but all-in-all we are extremely blessed to be working with such a great team of supporters & teachers.
